

GERMANS ARE ACTIVE IN BELGIUM AND FRANCE; TAKE GHENT, THREATEN OSTEND

INVADERS ATTEMPT TO REPEAT RAPID SWEEPING MOVEMENT WHICH BROUGHT THEM NEAR PARIS.

VON KLUCK NOW IN LILLE

German Commander Captures French City Without Important Opposition — Allies Get Re-enforcements and Start Offensive.

The attempt of the Germans to crush the right wing of the Allies, in the old French province of Picardy, continues with little news to indicate the course of the battle. This afternoon the French official statement says that the operations of the Allies so far as the Oise, are developing normally.

Of scarcely less importance and with the same objection in view is the struggle of the Germans from Antwerp to reach the coast. Nothing definite of this situation has been revealed. Paris announces that there was fighting in the region of Ghent Tuesday and that English and French troops have occupied Ypres, a Belgian town in West Flanders, thirty miles southwest of Bruges.

A report from the Hague is that fifty thousand Germans have entered Ghent, a large number of them later leaving for Bruges with purpose of continuing to Ostend. A dispatch from Ostend says that only a few Belgian and British remain in Ostend indicating that the Allied armies have gone east to meet the Germans.

The Belgian government has now been re-established at Havre, France.

A Petrograd dispatch says that it is believed there that a great battle between the Russians and the Austro-German force is being waged along the Vistula river at point now revealed.

The Germans made an aeroplane attack on Nancy Tuesday. It is reported from Berlin that the Germans are preparing to attack the French city of Belfort.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) London, Oct. 14.—Out of the mass of wholly irreconcilable assertions regarding the war in Europe, emerges the seemingly established fact that the Germans are attempting to repeat the rapid sweeping movement which five weeks ago took them to the gates of Paris.

With most of Belgium practically occupied, there is nothing to stop the invaders from reaching the coast and remain there momentarily, unless the British naval guns are able to render them impossible. The length of their stay at the popular seaside resort, should they seize Ostend, will, of course, depend upon the outcome of the great battle now understood to be opening near the frontier separating the province of West Flanders and Flanders from the French department of the north.

Allies Get Re-enforcements. Beyond an unconfirmed report of fighting in the direction of Zeebrugge, a coast town fifteen miles northeast of Ostend, there is no further news of the German advance in this city. Further south there is reason to believe that the left wing of the Allies has been strongly reinforced and confirmation of this is found in the statement in the latest report from General Joffre, the French commander in chief, that the offensive against the Germans has been resumed in that part of the line of battle.

In order to strengthen his forces in this vicinity, General Von Kluck has moved an entire army corps into Lille. This manufacturing city has once before been in German hands and has once been in a German line since the early stage of hostilities. The occupation today does not seem to have been seriously contested, in fact, it is explained here that it could have been, without disarranging the Allies' line.

Germans Want Arras. According to a dispatch from London, the Germans have been particularly anxious to reach Arras and thus secure control of the railroads to the north and south, but according to a French official announcement, the Allies have checked their movement in this direction and have made a "marked advance between Arras and Albert where the principal German efforts are centered."

"The intermingling of the armies along a front of 100 miles appeared today to be as chaotic as is the news regarding the operations furnished by the intelligence department of the different headquarters. The French armies are declared to be gaining ground at Berry-Au-Bac, northwest of Arras, and at Souleuvre on the east side of the Oise, while at least one portion of the German army under the Duke of Wurtemberg is still holding its position between them on the plains of Marne.

Again, further to the east, the French occupy Apremont, and the forest of the Argonne, well to the north of the position which the army under the German crown prince has for long been trying to reduce. To the east of the position of the crown prince the French are said to be pushing toward Metz. It is reported that in order to improve the crown prince's chance of reducing Verdun, some of the siege guns released from Antwerp are now on the way to join him.

Paris Announcement. Paris, Oct. 14.—The following official announcement was given out in Paris this afternoon:

"In the Belgian field of operations there were some encounters during the night of October 12-13, and during the day of the 13th in the region of Ghent. English and French troops have occupied Ypres. "First—On our left wing as far as the Oise, the operations are developing normally.

"Second—On the center previous reports of the progress of our armies in the region of Berry-Au-Bac, have been confirmed.

"Third—On our right there is nothing new. "While it is not our custom to reply to the inaccuracies of the German press, it seems to us proper to denounce the false news published in certain newspapers concerning the pretended destruction of French divisions of French cavalry. The information is absolutely erroneous. The truth is that certain forces of French cavalry, with German support, have been engaged for several days along the front of La Bassée, Estaires and Bailleul. The German cavalry succeeded in making a very slight advance between the canal of La Bassée and the Lys, but they were obliged to draw back in the territory north of Lys.

Aviators Chase Cavalry. "The losses sustained by the German cavalry are assuredly as perceptible as our own. One of the German divisions suffered particularly because it was pursued during one entire day by our aviators who did not cease to throw bombs down upon the German troops.

"Another case is the fact that the Germans announce that they are undertaking the investment of Verdun. In this instance, also, to repeat the situation as set forth on several different occasions. The German official communication states that the Germans have succeeded up to the present time in bringing their lines against the fortified position of Verdun. They have, however, made a few futile efforts to envelope at a considerable distance the French fortresses which are operating around Verdun.

"One of these efforts was characterized by an attempt through the Argonne forest near Beaulieu, and Varennes. It will be recalled that this movement failed with very important losses. We did not even announce at the time that two German battalions had been annihilated in this engagement.

Attempt to Cross Meuse. "The other enveloping movement on the part of the Germans undertaken in much greater numerical strength, was directed toward crossing the Meuse in the region of St. Mihiel. If the Germans succeeded in reaching this river, the front between the Allies and Chaumont, all their efforts to advance further resulted in failure. These German forces found themselves caught on the flank by detachments of our troops which advanced from the south to the north through the southern section of the Woëvre district.

Germans Occupy Ghent. The Hague, Oct. 14.—According to a special dispatch to the Avon Post, no fewer than 50,000 Germans are in Ghent. Many of them, however, are leaving in the direction of Bruges. A German officer is quoted in this dispatch as saying that Ostend was the objective of the German advance.

Fighting in Belgium. A dispatch to Reuters from Ostend under date of October 11 says: "In the following violent engagements near Quatrebre, and Melle, 600 Germans were killed and a large number of others wounded. French marines charged with bayonettes and took 400 German prisoners. The enemy was obliged to retire in the direction of Oordgeest. The battle began again this morning in the neighborhood of Lyde."

Wireless From Berlin. Berlin, via wireless to Sayville, L. I., Oct. 14.—It is believed here that the army will now be able soon to force the French line. Emperor William personally telephoned the news of the fall of Antwerp to the empress. It is officially stated that the bomb thrown by the enemy's airplane on the Zeppelin shed at Düsseldorf, caused comparatively little damage. The roof of the shed shows an insignificant hole. It is reported that the airship in the shed were not inflated with gas, and consequently the damage was slight and easily repaired.

King of Belgium, in order to avoid useless bloodshed, is said here to have intended to surrender Antwerp but was prevented by the British, who had the defense before the garrison withdrew. The British, it is said, destroyed thirty-two merchant ships and twenty-two German Rhine river vessels lying in the harbor at Antwerp. This act is described as wanton destruction in the interest of defense. An official telegraph agency of Petrograd admits that the Russians suffered great loss in men and guns during the Austro-Hungarian September with the Austro-Hungarians.

RUSSIAN EVACUATION OF LEMBERG CLAIMED

AWAIT POLAND BATTLE

Austro-German and Russian Armies Are Facing Each Other in Sixty Mile Battle Front.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) London, Oct. 14.—In a dispatch from The Hague the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company says that the Austrian legation of The Hague announces that the Russians have evacuated Lemberg, Galicia, after a fierce fight. Lemberg has been in possession of the Russians since shortly after the beginning of their Galician campaign.

London, Oct. 14.—The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent in a dispatch dated Tuesday says that a great struggle has now been going on for three days between the Russians and Austro-German forces along the Vistula river. "In an arena other than had been expected, is the beginning of a battle which probably last for weeks. Concerning the discussion of the conflict, he said:

Front of Sixty Miles. "It is occurring on a front sixty miles long on the left bank of the Vistula, presumably representing the center of German hostilities. It may be supposed that the Austrian remnant fled up with heavy losses from the last reserve, has succeeded in recovering some semblance of an organized army under shield of a German corps in the neighborhood of Cracow and that the Russian frontier is neutralizing their flank to flank 11 and endeavor to hold the positions still left unbroken.

Stalling for Time. "From descriptions given of the war, it appears that either side is anxious to do more than make time, the Russians being content with having defeated and thrown the Germans on to the east frontier."

Regarding the sinking of the Russian cruiser, Palles, by German submarines, the correspondent says: "I hear of the German submarine attack on Russian cruisers on two successive days and of the sinking of the Palles on the second day, which occurred 500 or 600 miles from any German port. Their interference follows the capture of the Russian cruiser, Palles, in the Baltic at a spot unknown, or else Germany has continued to misuse neutral territory.

"Some of those on board were saved, but six members of the crew were left behind on the shore. The total loss is about 400 men and 29 officers."

Reports Battle Waging. Washington, Oct. 14.—Col. Golejewski, military attaché at the Russian embassy here, received today the following official dispatch from Petrograd: "A battle has begun on a line extending from the country around Warsaw along the rivers Vistula and San, to Przemyśl and further to the mouth of the river Dniester. "In east Prussia the situation remains unchanged."

Austria Report. Manchester, Mass., October 14.—Independent of the daily communication received from the Austrian general staff, the Austrian embassy here received the following resume of recent military operations covering a period up to October 10.

Our center offensive, (that goes hand in hand with the advance of strong German forces, toward the Vistula line in Russian Poland), has already successfully advanced to the line of the Carpathians at St. Stanislaw.

"The Russians retreat everywhere. Their desperate attempts to take Przemyśl were repulsed and they are about to give up the siege. "The Russian column that crossed the Carpathians at three points were thrown back with heavy losses. "The passes are already in the possession of our army advancing on the offensive.

"Our advance in Serbia proceeds slowly and binds the Serbian main force. The Serbian-Montenegrin forces which have been advancing toward Jarajew were thrown back in several fights and are now retreating partly toward the Serbian and partly toward the Montenegrin-Sandshak frontier."

Questioned by one of his hearers whether this was absolutely necessary, the ambassador replied: "You must accept the hint without asking the reason."

PORTUGAL ISSUES WAR DECLARATION

So Says Unconfirmed Report from Madrid—Would Fight Germans—Congress to be Called Friday.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Madrid, Oct. 14.—It is reported from Lisbon that Portugal has declared war against Germany. The message, while lacking official confirmation, is published in Madrid.

London, Oct. 14.—Cabling from Lisbon, the correspondent of the Central News says that it is reported that the German minister to Portugal and other German residents in Lisbon are about to leave for Madrid. As a result of cabinet meetings and the conferences between the leaguers of the various Portuguese parties and the president of the republic, the correspondent continues, it has been resolved to convene congress Friday, Oct. 16, in order to pass a vote for the mobilization of Portuguese troops.

Will London still dominate the styles for men? Will there be a new and distinctly American note in clothing?

What will be the influence of the war on male attire? That there will be distinct changes in many classes of apparel as a result of European conditions is apparent. They may not, however, manifest themselves until Spring styles are ready.

GOVERNMENT TROOPS SIEGE TRAMWAY LINE IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

Power Company Taken by Carranza's Forces Following Refusal to Meet Strike Demands.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Mexico City, October 12, by Corrier to Vera Cruz, October 14.—The seizure of the Mexico City Tramways company lines by the Carranza government, today was made at the point of the layonette.

Through a depreciation in the Mexican press, the management of the Tramway line informed the government today of its inability to grant the demands of the men for shorter hours and double wages, declaring that passengers were now being transported at less than one and a half cent gold. Immediately thereafter soldiers took possession of the property.

The act caused a sensation as the Tramway company and the allied Mexican Light and Power Company, Ltd. supply all the power, light, heat, and transportation within a radius of thirty miles of the capital. The joint investment of the allied companies represent nearly $100,000,000. Passengers arriving from Aguas Calientes say that General Villa is thirty miles north of the city with a large force and is determined to fight unless the adherents of Carranza agree for a commission form of government.

BANKERS HOLD HOPES FOR RESERVE SCHEME

NATION'S BANKERS MEET IN FORTIETH CONVENTION AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

"SAFETY FIRST" POLICY

Federal Reserve Banks, Chief Item of Debate and Planning—See Success in Law.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Richmond, Va., October 4.—The fortieth annual convention of the American Bankers' Association which met here today brought the American bankers together in large numbers for the first time since the Federal Reserve Act was passed by Congress. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, president of the association, devoted the greater part of his opening address to the Federal Reserve scheme. He gave assurances that the country might rely upon the bankers to do their part toward making the system a success, notwithstanding their opposition to it in just the form adopted. He noted some of its fine points and its weaknesses, and advised the bankers how to adjust themselves to the change.

National bankers had submerged their opinions, he said, and were cordially coming to the support of the Federal Reserve Banks, as required by the act. He pointed out that the bank and trust companies organized under state laws had come into the system, "but not to the extent necessary to warrant the anticipation of that complete domination of our entire banking system as some desired." The rule of the banker must be "safety first," he said, in considering the difficulties. The Federal Reserve Banks would have in keeping in mind the means necessary to relieve sudden distress, and at the same time to rediscount freely enough to avert contraction of credit. "It will be a rare wisdom, indeed," he said, "to meet so contradictory a situation."

If there were any assurance that the Federal Reserve Banks would hold large deposits aside from those fixed by provisions of the act, he thought there might be a workable margin, but he saw no inducement for member banks to keep active accounts with the Federal Reserve Banks beyond the amount of required reserve. "Their commercial relations with the other banks of the country will always be more productive and more in line with the natural trend of business," he said.

Gist of Address. "With the practicability of the plan admitted, the question that naturally propounds itself to those engaged in banking is, how will its operation affect the profits of their business. Reasoning from the fact that the Federal Reserve Banks will not enter into competition for the commercial business of the country and for the reason that they will be obliged to quote a rate of discount at least as high as the market rate, commercial rates in order to maintain the resources necessary to enable them to extend help in need, I believe the conclusion is warranted that in the future the Federal Reserve Banks will be governed by the law of supply and demand.

"The Federal Reserve Banks have no way of increasing the supply of actual money, and if they had, they might reduce rates. Their more efficient help in that connection may at times result from raising rates to other conditions.

Effect of Rate. "It is necessary to cite the fact that in those countries which depend upon central banks to maintain the stability of their currency, their experience has prevented those policies to which we have been subjected. The fact that these central banks maintain a discount rate always higher than the commercial rate in the same country.

The benefits of the new system will be most apparent as the lapse of time. The change will be gradual and should be regarded as an evolution in the banking business, during which the bankers themselves must rely upon their own resources. Conservation should be the watchword. Any effort to utilize the rediscounting privilege primarily for profit should be discouraged.

"It must always be kept in mind that to realize the chief object which Congress had in view the Federal Reserve banks must always be ready to extend their credit to the nation in this position if the member banks keep them drained of their resources in ordinary times.

Advantage of Act. He saw a great advantage from the new act in the maintenance of a foreign exchange market, and thought the federal exchange banks should invest in foreign bills, instead of solely in rediscounts to domestic banks. It was this class of business, he said that was sought by the bankers of Great Britain and its ramifications extending all over the world had made London its financial center.

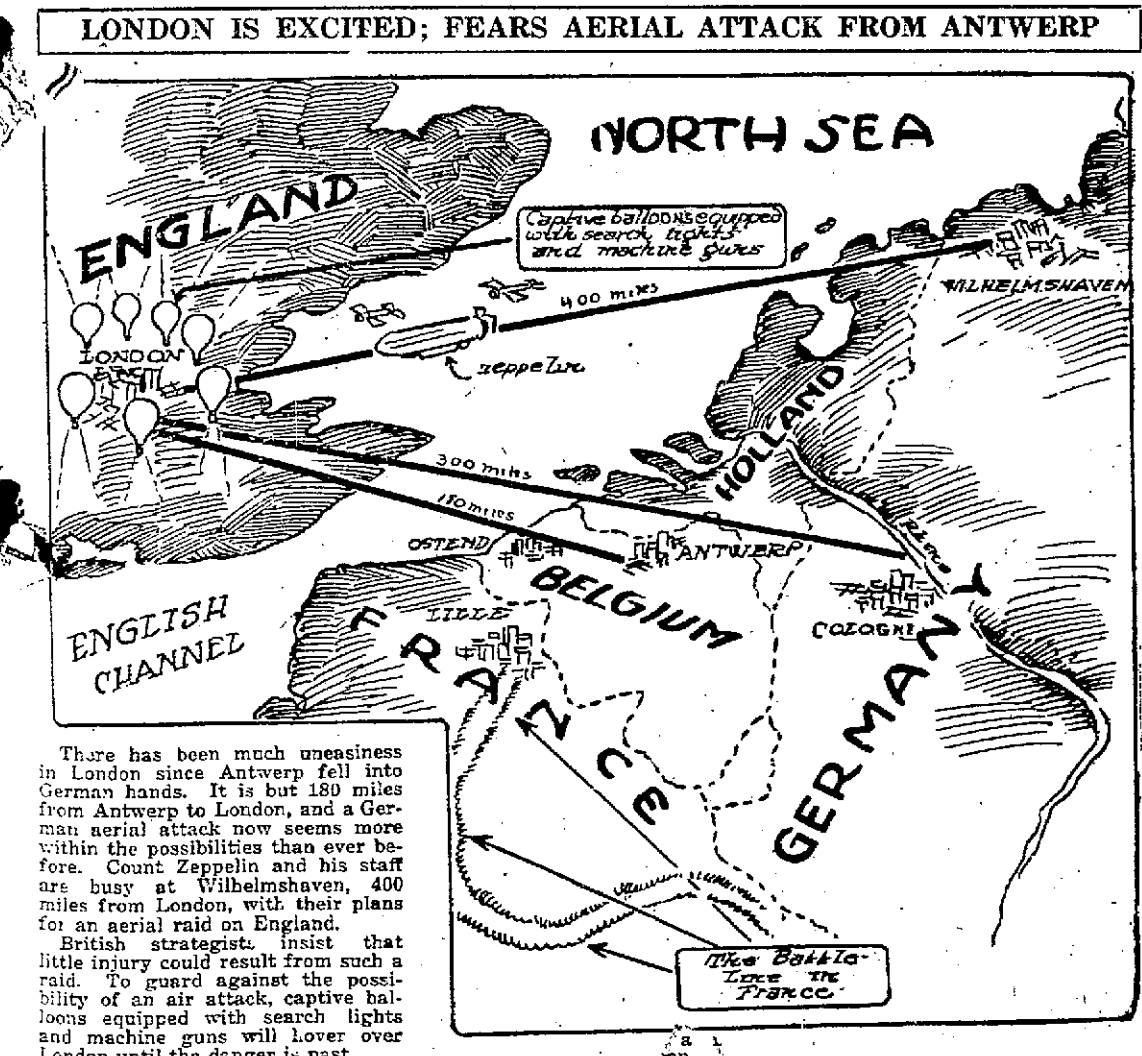

He said that it was a popular misconception that with the opening of the Federal Reserve banks, government funds would be deposited in those banks and the independent treasury system of the United States and its consequent expense to the government and to the business of the country would be a thing of the past. "A careful reading of the law," he said, "discloses the fact that its authors had no such intention, and that if the government funds are deposited in those banks it will be at the discretion of the secretary of the treasury alone.

"It is a just criticism of the measure," he continued, "to say that it does not take the government out of the banking business, and that it confers upon one of our government officials an extraordinary power and discretion over the world's money. Our institutions are repugnant to republican principles.

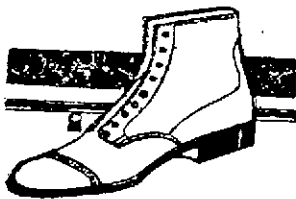

"The power conferred upon the secretary of the treasury to control money and credit, if attempted by the members of this association would probably call for a special act of congress to curtail their activities.

He referred to the failure of the bankers to have their say in the modification of the federal reserve act. It was a representation to which their interests clearly entitled them, he argued, but he believed the advisory council of bankers which had been authorized, similar to the one in vogue in Germany, "should have an influence upon the administration of the system that was denied them in its present form."

BUTTERMILK CHEESE IS LATEST FOOD TO BEAT MR. H. C. OF L.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 14.—Why buy beefsteak at prohibitive prices when buttermilk cheese is just as nourishing, pound for pound, and costs but as much? After considerable investigation, the Wisconsin agricultural college wants to know. Buttermilk cheese is the latest solution of the H. C. of L. problem. The school points out that large quantities of the buttermilk are being wasted annually in Wisconsin because its food value is not generally known. The manufacture of nourishing cheese—as sustaining as beefsteak—from buttermilk is simple. The agricultural school is trying to add this by-product to Wisconsin's already large output of dairy products.

PERFECTING PLANS FOR HOME HELPERS

BUREAU THAT WILL PROVE VALUABLE ASSET TO EVERY HOME BEING FORMED.

LIST READY SHORTLY

Will Fill Long Needed Want in the City—Many Names Already Received by Committee.

Within the next week or ten days it is expected that the Bureau of Home Helpers, suggested by several ladies in the city, who have seen the need of such a co-operative association, will be ready to start. It is a project that will unite those who have time, either at their own home or outside their home, to earn extra money, and those homes where extra help in various lines of work, is needed frequently.

It is a sort of combination co-operative association whereby both the person employed and the employer will receive mutual benefit. It is not a money-making scheme, there is no charge for registration and the list, when completed, will be accessible to all who desire services of those who have entered their names.

In discussing the project one woman said: "The sooner it starts the better. Just at present I could use the services of some young girl who wants to earn extra money in helping me care for my children when I want to go out on an afternoon or evening. I have some plain sewing that must be done and I am not sure to find time for it with my other household duties. I wanted someone to help me serve a small luncheon I want to school day and had hard work to find anyone. There must be lots of young girls or women who would be glad for an hour or so work work in this line, if one but knew where to find them."

One woman who came to the Gazette office to add her name to the list said on the project: "I have lots of spare time outside my own work that I would be glad to utilize in earning some money. I can cook or bake at home if needed. I can do sewing; I can also serve at luncheon and now that I understand this plan please put my name down."

One small boy with a bicycle came in to ask if his services could be used to run errands after school and on Saturdays and was told he could, and down went his name. In fact one of the women back of the plan suggests that other boys and girls who can work after school hours and want to earn money, be listed as there are many homes where something is wanted from down town or some errand done, where the housewife would be glad of such services.

One of the women behind the project said today: "While our list is rapidly taking form, we can use lots more names and I wish you would urge upon all who would be glad to exchange their services at odd times for money, to send in their addresses so we may get in touch with them. It is not a philanthropic movement, but one for mutual benefit. All lines of work may be utilized and our object is to bring together the people who can do things needed about a home and those are willing to do the work. We their service will be paid by the hour when they come to the various homes and by the piece or some suitable arrangement when done at home."

The following is the list of employments that has been suggested and needed and all addresses can be left at the Gazette office, mailed or sent in and will be delivered to the committee having charge of the organization of the Helpers' Bureau. The list is as follows:
Plain sewing.
Mending.
Making buttonholes.
Embroidery.
Crocheting.
Care of children (day time or evening).
Serving for luncheons.
Serving for dinners.
Serving for afternoon teas.
Baking (including bread, rolls, doughnuts, potato chips, cake).
Preserving.
Cleaning silver.
Glove cleaning.
Sweeping and dusting.
Washing dishes.
Special laundry work.
Window cleaning.
Rug cleaning.
Gardening.
Mowing lawns.
Boys' messenger service.
Any young girl who wishes to learn to serve for dinners, luncheons or teas will be taught if she makes application through this bureau.
Compensation for different forms of service enumerated above will vary but will be arranged for with the applicant.

The above plan is not entirely an original one but is new to Janesville. It has been tried with success in several cities and found to be most advantageous to both the housekeeper and those who would be glad to utilize extra hours in this way.

OBSEQUIES HELD FOR MRS. AGNESS BELL

The deceased had lived in Janesville since 1855, and up to within a few weeks of her death, had enjoyed excellent health, barring the fact that she was a semi-invalid. A broken hip, sustained two weeks ago, hastened her death, which came after a great deal of suffering. Her loss will be keenly felt among the older residents of the city who knew and respected her for the good qualities that she possessed.

MAKE DAMAGE CLAIM TO CITY COMMISSION

Alfred Bahr Presents Claim for $2,500 for Water Damages to Property in Spring Brook.

Alfred H. Bahr, residing at 452 George Place, presented a claim of $2,500 damages to property to the city council at their meeting held yesterday afternoon, which was referred to City Attorney W. H. Dougherty, who will make a report on the claim at the next meeting of the commission.

It was claimed in the petition for damages that the switch track of the Chicago and Northwestern railway has been allowed to turn drainage water in Spring Brook on the property of Bahr and a clogged drain flooded the yard and cellar of his residence. The claim was read before the council, with Councilman Cummings presiding, as Mayor Fathers was absent from the city, and then turned over to the city attorney.

The council allowed the labor bill for street employees for the past two weeks and orders drawn on the city treasurer for the amount of $1,807.21. On motion, meeting was adjourned until Friday.

The board of public works, with Councilmen Cummings and Goodman and City Engineer C. V. Kerch present, met before the council session and accepted the curb and gutter improvement work on South Jackson street from Western avenue to Riverside street.

EVENING SCHOOL IN OPENING LAST NIGHT

THREE HUNDRED ARE PRESENT AT FIRST CLASSES, DESPITE THE INCLEMENT WEATHER.

LOOK FOR BIG SEASON

Dressmaking and Sewing Classes Are Precursors in Attendance.—A Few Classes Failed to Organize.

Principal C. F. Hill and his corps of some twenty-five faculty instructors, together with about three hundred enthusiastic students, young and old, of this city, opened the evening school last evening for another season at the high school and industrial school buildings, at seven-thirty.

The inevitable weather kept many anxious, prospective students living on the outskirts of the city away from their preferable class, which cut the attendance greatly in number. By another week, a larger enrollment can be expected.

The classes in dressmaking and sewing proved to be the forerunners for attendance. The advanced dressmaking class, directed by Miss Gertrude Buchholz, was started with thirty members. The plain sewing and elementary dressmaking class, under the supervision of N. Beta Bailey, organized with about thirty students, while the dressmaking class for novices, organized with over fifty women. The latter class, because of its large enrollment, will be divided into two sections. The sections will meet on the first floor at the high school twice weekly, and will occupy three rooms.

The popular gas engine course was started with a roving attendance under the direction of E. J. Manning. Public speaking will commence on Thursday, with Principal Shearor of the high school as instructor. This class will meet but once each week. An attempt to organize a public speaking class for women failed last night, when not enough interested in the study.

Conversational French proved to be interesting to many. There were present who had had French before to a certain extent, while the remaining students attending the class had never taken the subject. Father Hecaria will divide his group into two classes, on the educational basis. It is expected others will join one of these French classes by another week.

Two classes in stenography, beginners and advanced divisions, were organized last evening by a sufficient number of students to warrant two classes. However, the advanced class will be continued, if enough more enroll by Thursday night. Gay W. Curtis will be the instructor.

The class in blue print reading and carpentry organized with a good number present. Herman Leuck will direct the students in this study and he expects a larger class in another week.

The course in pharmacy organized. Those young men expecting eventually to prepare for securing papers are especially urged to join this class. A class in art filing was organized under the instruction of George O. St. Clair.

Two classes in cooking were organized. One meets in the Lincoln building industrial school kitchen under the direction of Miss Ella Knehltau, while Miss Grace Mathews will have charge of the other class, meeting in the high school. The former class will meet but once a week. Miss Maude Inman, instructor of the millinery class, was pleased with her first group of students. More will join later. It is anticipated. Elementary bookkeeping, taught by Miss Nelle Hudson, met in the Lincoln building and organized. The class in English for foreigners met very favorably with non-speaking English people, and to some English speaking people. Miss Alice M. Donnelly, instructor, finds it necessary to divide her students into two divisions. Novices will occupy one class, while those understanding some English will become members of the other class. An invitation is being extended to those foreigners desiring some special drill in some line mentioned in the courses to make themselves known and plans will be made to instruct them individually if necessary. There are many foreigners who have never had school advantages. To this class of people the evening school especially desires to come in touch with. The elementary subjects will be taken up materialize in this line. Indications at present being very promising.

Machine drawing and shop mathematics will be taken up if enough more enroll on Thursday night to warrant a class. Also another effort will be made Thursday to organize the classes in home cobbling, sheet-metal working, electric bell wiring, commercial law, concrete construction, electricity, hand craft furniture, and practical bookkeeping and commercial correspondence. The classes in Principal Hill is at his office daily in the Lincoln building, and anyone wishing to talk over the various courses with him are urged to do so. There is a wide interest in the school, an interest that is increasing annually, and with a little boosting, the evening school this winter should be a source where valuable information and instruction can be derived by any citizen in the city. New classes other lines will be organized upon the suggestion and desirability of the interested.

THE HUMAN SIDE.

We talk about the brutalities of war and the brute forces which seem to control men on the fields of strife, but here are two or three little incidents which reveal the human side, and indicate that the heart of humanity is very much alike everywhere.

A correspondent of the Associated Press, in a letter published on September 23rd, describes "a reconciliation on the battlefield between French and German soldiers who lay wounded and abandoned near the little town of Blamont. When dawn came they conversed with each other while waiting for death."

"A French soldier gave his water bottle to a German officer, who was crying out with thirst. The German sipped a little and then kissed the hand of the man who had been his enemy. 'There will be no war on the other side,' he said."

"Another Frenchman, who came from Montmartre, found a Luxembourgish boy lying within a yard of him, whom he had known as a messenger in a big hotel in Paris. The young German wept to see his old acquaintance."

"It is stupid," he said, "this war. You and I were happy when we were good friends in Paris. Why should we have been made to fight with each other? He died with his arms around the neck of the soldier who told me the story, unashamed of his own tears."

Are not incidents of this kind more creditable to humanity than the destruction of armed foes?

Is not the discipline and training which produce fraternity and mutual affection better than the carnage of war?

In short, is not the great fraternal movement, as we see it in America, better than the military system of Europe?

OPTIMISTIC.

Of course we are optimistic. Why not?

Are we saddled with a daily extra expense of $7,000,000?

Are we sacrificing the flower of our country and leaving the aged and infirm to propagate the race?

Decidedly NO!

But we are receiving orders from England for great consignments of sheet steel for portable houses.

Detroit automobile manufacturers are receiving orders for trucks running in value into the millions, rumored to be from Russia.

The Pittsburgh Steel company has received an order, said to be from the French government, for 500,000 reels of barbed wire—125,000 miles of wire!

Great Britain has closed contracts with St. Louis firms for 165,000 saddle trees.

Modest City, Mo., manufacturers are figuring on a big contract for shoes for the French army.

Germany has been furnishing England with great quantities of electrical supplies and electric time-clocks. Duplicates are here and American manufacturers have been asked to figure on their production.

One of the well known houses of Paris has closed its factories and will soon announce New York as its headquarters.

Here we have business brought to us on a platter, and we are begged to stop crying long enough to do some business.

Is it time to cry or smile?

Obviously it is the time to smile.

A trade journal thus discusses the outlook for business and the opportunities for increasing trade, which are forced upon us from the war zone.

The writer fails to mention another channel to the south, where the Pan-American countries, of both Central and South America, are clamoring for goods.

A large volume of this trade has formerly gone to the European countries, but these markets are closed indefinitely, and America is expected to supply their needs. We are in no way responsible for the war, with all its horrors, but the obligation is upon us to meet the demands for supplies to all nations effected directly or indirectly, and this means the investment of both capital and labor, in liberal measure.

The United States is the one great nation at peace with all mankind. It is now the world's great supply nation and we can not shirk the responsibility. Every factory in the land should soon be running over-time, and every acre of land should be made to produce to the limit to meet the new demand at our doors. No less sympathy for the stricken people, but more hard work to aid in feeding and caring for them, is the double obligation which confronts us.

Rock county democrats have met and organized, discussed ways and means and planned for an aggressive campaign to land their legislative and county tickets in office. With all due respect to democracy the candidates on the republican side of the political fence are far better qualified for the work at hand and should be supported. In Whitteit and Winegar the republicans have nominated two of the strongest men obtainable for the coming legislative session and they should be given the hearty endorsement of the voters and taxpayers.

Philipp continues to make friends among the voters by his straightforward explanation of the issues at stake in the present election, and with McGovern will head the republican landslide at the polls next November that will demonstrate that the voters are thinking for themselves and not being lead around like sheep to the slaughter by scheming politicians.

In another column will be found the suggestions of the Home Rule League relative to the rejection of the ten amendments to the state constitution which the ultra progressives would place on the statute books. Wisconsin has passed through a strenuous period of experimental legislation and it is time to call a halt so that the wisest way is to vote no on all the amendments at the November election.

Now that the Germans have Antwerp what are they going to do with it? Of course from a strategic point of view it is a good thing to hold this port, but unless they violate the Dutch neutrality they can't use it as a naval base after all. Meanwhile the Belgian capital has been moved into France although the king remains on Belgium soil to fight it out to the last ditch with his army.

The proposed Home Helpers' Bureau is a move in the right direction. It is a plan to get together people having labor to dispose of and those who want to pay for its employment. It is a co-operative scheme that should be most beneficial to all concerned and should meet with ready response of those who have spare time which they can convert into money.

The success of the past year in oiling the streets is demonstrated more and more as the fall rains come in. Janesville streets have not been in as good condition for years as they are at the present time.

Today ends the baseball epidemic for the year. However there are lots of "around the stove" ball players that can talk all winter on how they would have played this game or that and will be able to speculate what will happen next season. Meanwhile football has the cry.

On The Spur of The Moment

A Memory

I remember, I remember,
When courtin' Sal I went;
The parlor where so many Delightful hours we spent;
The good old horsehair sofa,
The crayon portraits, too,
Which stared so impudently
As crayon portraits do;
The what-not in the corner
Filled up with ancient junk,
The stuffed owl on the mantel
Who listened to the bunk
I peddled just like you did,
When courtin' Sal, you bet—
And life was simply heaven,
When I was wooing Sal.

I remember, I remember,
How I marched up the aisle;
The knot tied by the pastor
Has held for quite a while.
The horsehair sofa's missing,
The crayon portraits, too;
We're living in apartments
With modern stuff clear through.
The stuffed owl is not with us,
Perched up above the grate;
We have no corner what-not,
For we are up-to-date.
I remember, I remember,
I married Sal, you bet—
The landlord and the neighbors
Will not let me forget.

Old Man Sperry died last week and went to the great beyond after reading this paper for nothing nineteen years. He will probably not find much of a change in the great beyond, as he had for twenty-seven years held the lucrative position of fireman at Gil Pritchard's sawmill down on Swazey Creek.

Ezra Briggs' brindle tried to swallow a scythe and spade last week and feels quite cut up about it at this writing.

Hank Taskins and Hi Higgins have returned from froggin' on Swazey Creek. Old Late Tubbs asked Hank what he was going to do with the frogs, and Hank said he was thinkin' of sellin' them to the railroad company that runs through our midst. Hank is quite comic sometimes. ## COAL MINE "SCABS" AND UNION MINERS

Writer Tells of Riot at Hecla Mine Near Louisville, Colo., During Trouble in June.

V. F. Kelley, a former drug clerk of this city, who is now located at Louisville, Colo., the heart of the southwestern coal district and at the place where late in June a terrible riot occurred when union miners, striking for better working conditions and more pay, charged on the Hecla mine and created such a scene of disorder that the Colorado state militia were consequently called forth to quell the disturbance. Later President Wilson was compelled to send regular soldiers to Louisville.

Of this eventful night Mr. Kelley writes to former Janesville friends.
The letter is as follows:

"You people who have never experienced a strike would no doubt like to know of the manner in which one is carried on especially in the west."

"After the union miners 'walked out' and the 'scabs' began to come into Louisville it was one big fight.
The coal company began the construction of stockades for the strike breakers. When they came to town they were always well armed. The union men and they would get into a quarrel before the latter were in the town thirty minutes. Great numbers were killed in these brawls and the police force seemed wholly inadequate to quell the riots, for riots they were when hostilities began.

"The climax came when 200 union men on June 29th, marched on the Hecla mine. It was just about 10 o'clock that night and while I was preparing to close up.

"I heard the town bell ring and thinking there was a fire, ran over to the house to help with the hosecart. I soon learned the cause however, as everywhere men seemed to be running, all armed with guns. They were all making for the Hecla mine.

"About that time the mine men let loose their machine guns full on the charging union miners. I ran to the store but before I was able to get it closed, the place was full of men all trying to borrow guns.

"I finally succeeded in getting them out and sat for about twenty minutes in the window. The firing began to come closer and I went out and stood in front to see the trouble. The machine gun put out the light in the store and I took for the cellar. They were the safest places in town that night.

"It was not until thirty-six hours after the beginning of the battle that the call for state troops was answered and the militia arrived on the scene. During all this time there were many skirmishes and killed and wounded seemed to be everywhere.
Following the state troops came the regulars. Since then everything has been fine.

"They had a message from Washington telling them to erect winter quarters and so I guess they will remain here for the winter and, if the trouble is not cleared by then, until a time when the mine operators and the unions come to an agreement.

"The mines are now running on full time. Also they have all the men they want and I can see no possible way how the union men are to have a chance. The operators have absolutely nothing to do with the unions and the strikers now."

Some time ago the mine operators requested an audience with President Wilson to lay their side of the trouble before the chief executive and to inform him of the proposed plans they enjoyed for a speedy settlement of the situation with the miners' unions. Mr.
Wilson, on receipt of the request, wired immediately, granting the operators' plans would be doing the former a great injustice.

As yet the matter is still unsettled and "scab" miners are filling the places of union men.

STRUGGLE TO DECIDE WHO SHALL DOMINATE AFFAIRS OF EUROPE

DR. BEATON ANALYZES PRESENT CONFLICT AS WAR TO DETERMINE OLD WORLD LEADERSHIP.

BISMARCK REPUDIATED

Modern Germany Turns Back on Policies of Iron Chancellor When Belgian Neutrality Was Violated.

That the present titanic conflict now engaging the powers of the old world is a struggle to determine the dominance of Europe, was the ultimate analysis of the situation as presented by Dr. David Beaton in a mass meeting of the Twelfth club at the opening meeting of the Twelfth club for the season now at hand.

Taken Impartial Position.

Dr. Beaton prefaced his address with a short statement in which he declared his intent to deal with the subject in hand with the utmost impartiality. He was not an American citizen, he declared, for he had come to this country with a purpose and that was to find expression for his own belief in democracy. Consequently he was not anxious and solicitous to abide by the word and action of the president's neutrality proclamation, for he said, "we should realize our privileges as American citizens and do not permit our position as moral to be prejudiced by our position as moral."

There are two policies which we must understand from the first in order to treat with any seriousness the war in Europe," said the speaker in beginning his real address. "The first is the balance of power, or in other words the position of the states from Denmark on the north to Switzerland on the south, the neutrality of which has been an accepted fact since Napoleon's time. The second policy is the balance of power, which still remains unsettled, is a composite group of conditions including the presence of the Turk in Europe, the sovereignty of Russia over the Slav states, and the presence of nations which are not homogeneous as far as the races are concerned of which they are composed are brought together under the same government, the emergence of the demand of Poland for nationality. Beneath this struggle is the sum of at least five hundred years of history centered in the Slav states and Austria and involved in the formation of modern Germany since the time of Frederick the Great.

"The revelation of the war has brought, have been astonishing. They might be termed the psychology of the war and I will mention a few of the psychological phases which show that there is in the present an unprecedented change in mental attitude. In the first place there has been produced the bitterest partisan and national feeling between the combatants, the one and the other believe today that if Russian, British or French merchants were to be asked their opinion on the commercial result of the war they would all reply without exception that it was a war that there will be no trade between England and Germany, Russia and Germany and France and Germany for fifty years. Great Britain has already asked the New England and the fifty five million dollars worth of socks which were formerly purchased from Germany. This is a small item but multiplied by the other commodities it will give Germany a severe blow. Russia has stated that her trade with Germany amounts to $300,000,000 annually and has also declared that that business is for America if she will so take it. Trade and commerce has been disrupted in a sense that can scarcely be realized. These hostile nations will not trade with one another at least for the quarter of a century.

Another psychological phase of the war was shown by the utter paralysis of credit all over the world. Ordinary trade relations were absolutely destroyed. Even in America business conditions were and are yet most abnormal.

Lay Aside Internal Strife.

Then all of the nations at war had their own internal problems which at the time the war broke out were of the conflict were concerning them vitally. In England there was the home rule for Ireland, a question which was threatening even an armed outbreak; there was the German question and there was the Indian situation, all pressing for the nation's attention. France and Austria, and Germany and Russia also had their internal situations in which they were deeply concerned but all were forgotten and at the moment the electric shock of war crystallized each country into an absolute unit. It was an unprecedented situation.

"Why were those parties so made one? Why the intense racial hatred? Because the disruption of credit and business? Because something awful was happening in Europe?"

At this point Dr. Beaton touched upon another phase of the situation which has its important bearing on the German side of the conflict. Just as the philosophy of Russia, here and there, the encyclopedists had a greater influence on the French revolution than the popular revolt against unjust taxation which discriminated in favor of the nobility and clergy, just so have the teachings of such men as Nietzsche and Von Bernhardi, who preach an appeal to military strength as the only means to national greatness, left their impress on the people of Germany. In the forty years there has been a great change in the philosophy of Germany. The Germany of Goethe, Schiller, Beethoven, Kant and Hegel has a dream. Those were small and poor, ideals are not enough, is the modern contention. The present attitude is summed up in the phrase, "We must have power." Germany's dream has been a change in the intellectual and moral attitude of Germany toward the world. The speaker, "I shall not use the word 'ambition' but will choose rather the word 'conquest'."

STAMP OF SOCIALISM SEEN IN AMENDMENTS

OTTO OESTREICH ANALYZES PROPOSED CHANGES AT TWILIGHT CLUB SESSION.

NONE WORTH ADOPTING

W. H. Dougherty Joins in Urging Against Unnecessary Changes in State's Fundamental Law.

In addition to the address by Dr. Beaton, the Twelfth club enjoyed an interesting discussion of the matter of socialistic amendments to the state constitution, which will be voted on at the coming November election.

Otto Oestreich went over the ten proposed changes briefly explaining why they are unnecessary and in several instances pernicious to the actual welfare of the commonwealth. All of them, he said, bore the stamp of socialism. He was particularly critical of the proposed amendment to the state constitution which would give the state the power to engage in the insurance business, both fire and life. With this taken, the speaker said, would the state act as an insurer? What would hinder it to start at once agitation to give the state greater rights of interference in private affairs so that all lines of business might be trespassed against. The political feature of the proposal was significant, he said. State insurance would require an immense corps of state employees, solicitors and agents in every part of the state running up expenses of state administration. Furthermore the speaker pointed out that there was no demand for state insurance, a fact which he emphasized in connection with practically all of the proposed amendments.

There are two amendments, it was indicated, which are calculated to make the state government more efficient. The wisdom of this step was called into question. Time for deliberation and discussion should be allowed before the state insurance law, a great alteration in its fundamental character, and the lapse of several years could make no appreciable difference, it was contended.

The amendment providing home rule for cities was also discussed. The provision offered nothing new practically from what cities now enjoyed and in reality has little or no meaning unless the general law was changed so that cities could adopt charters which would give Wisconsin cities the opportunity to adopt charters as widely at variance one with each other.

In regard to the initiative and referendum, it was interesting to hear, according to the speaker, that the amendment gave the power in the case of all legislative matters except appropriations. This was calculated to safeguard the university from the state institutions so that they might be able to have their large expense accounts allowed without the obnoxious interferences of the voters.

The amendment providing for a state right to engage in the real estate business and was purely a measure evolved for the purpose of extending the capitol park to Lake Mendota, giving the state the opportunity for extensive land speculation.

The amendment providing for a centralization of the judiciary at Madison was also declared to be another attempt of the state to take over the business of local affairs. Oestreich stated that the socialist party was paying for space in the campaign pamphlet in which arguments favoring the amendments were given.

At the close of the discussion F. F. Lewis, leader for the evening, inquired the further pleasure of the club in the matter. "Vote 'em down," was the reply from the audience.

OPPOSE ASSESSMENT ON SUGAR FACTORY

Rock County Sugar Co. Appeals to Circuit Court Case in Controversy With Town of La Prairie.

The Rock County Sugar company and the town of La Prairie are in litigation. According to the facts of the case which has been taken into circuit court, David Jones, the town assessor, this year assessed the real estate of the company and improvements thereon at $200,000. When the board of review of the township met last June, Captain James Davidson, the principal stockholder of the company, and M. G. Jettis, his attorney, appeared and sought to have the assessment lowered. Captain Davidson stated under oath that he would be willing to sell the property for $30,000 cash. He added that he considered it an abandoned plant; that it might never start up again, its future depending altogether on business conditions. When asked what the value of the plant was five years ago, he stated that it was about $400,000; that after that came the fluctuations of drought and free trade. The factory could have been built at that time, he stated, for approximately $450,000.

The board of review, after consideration, refused to change the assessment. It had been assessed that amount for the past two or three years.

Subsequently the Rock County Sugar company petitioned the circuit court of Rock county for a writ of certiorari, which was granted, the court commanding the town to carry out and return into court all the proceedings in relation to the assessment of the property of the Rock County Sugar company for the year 1914. On Oct. 10, the town of La Prairie returned S. Nolan, its attorney, filed its return to the writ, which return contained everything in the office of the clerk of the township pertaining to said assessment. The matter is now set for the circuit court at the coming term. The outcome is looked forward to with considerable interest. If the assessment is changed as desired by the Rock County Sugar company, the taxes of others owning property in the township will be considerably increased.

CHAPTER XVI.

Marking Time.

Soon after dark the attack began. Flashes from gun muzzles and glowing sheets of flame from rifles made ugly revelry, while the beams of search-lights swept hither and thither. This kept up till shortly after midnight, when it died down and, where bell's concert had raged, silent darkness shrouded the hills. Marta knew that Bordir was taken without having to ask Lanstron or wait for confirmation from Westerling.

She was seated in the recess of the arbor the next morning, when she heard the approach of those regular, powerful steps whose character had become as distinct to her as those of a member of her own family. Five against three! Five against three! They were saying to her; while down the pass road and the castle road ran the stream of wounded from last night's slaughter.

Posted in the drawing-room of the Galland house were the congratulations of the premier to Westerling, who had come from the atmosphere of a staff that accorded to him a military insight far above the analysis of ordinary standards. But he was too clever a man to vaunt his triumph. He knew how to carry his honors. He accepted success as his due, in a matter-of-course manner that must inspire confidence in further success.

"You were right," he said to Marta easily, pleasantly. "We did it—we did it—we took Bordir with a loss of only twenty thousand men!"

Only twenty thousand! Her revulsion at the bald statement was relieved by the memory of Lanny's word over the telephone after breakfast that the Browns had lost only five thousand. Four to one was a wide ratio, she was thinking.

"Then the end—then peace is so much nearer?" she asked.

"Very much nearer!" he answered earnestly, as he dropped on the bench beside her.

He stretched his arms out on the back of the seat and the relaxed attitude, unusual with him, brought into relief a new trait of which she had hitherto been oblivious. The conqueror had become simply a companionable man. Though he was not sitting close to her, yet, as his eyes met hers, she had a desire to move away which she knew would be unwise to gratify. She was conscious of a certain softening charm, a magnetism that she had sometimes felt in the days when she first knew him. She realized, too, that then the charm had not been mixed with the indescribable, intimate quality that it held now.

"In the midst of congratulations after the position was taken last night," he declared, "I confess that I was thinking less of success than of his source." He bent on her a look that was warm with gratitude.

She lowered her lashes before it; before gratitude that made her part year in a fresh angle of misery.

"There seems to be a kind of fatality about our relations," he went on. "You awake pondering it last night. My tone held more than gratitude. It had the elation of discovery."

"He is going to make it harder than I ever guessed!" echoed her own thought, in a flutter of confusion.

"Yes, it was strange our meeting on the frontier in peace and then in war!" she exclaimed at random. The sound of the remark struck her as too subdued, as expectant, when her purpose was one of careless deprecation.

"I have met a great many women, as you may have imagined," he proceeded. "They have passed in review. They were simply women, witty and full of dull and beautiful, and one meant no more to me than another. Nothing meant anything to me except my profession. But I never forgot you. You planted something in mind: a memory of real companionship."

"Yes, I made the prophecy that came true!" she put in. This caught to bring him back to himself and his ambitions, she thought.

"Yes!" he exclaimed, his body stiffening free of the back of the seat. "You realized what was in me. You foresaw the power which was to be mine. The fate that first brought us together made me look you up in the capital. Now it brings us together here on this bench after all that has passed in the last twenty-four hours."

She realized that he had drawn perceptibly nearer. She wanted to rise and cry out: "Don't do this! He the chief of staff, the conqueror, crushing the earth with the tread of five against three!" It was the conqueror whom she wanted to trick, not a man whose earnestness was painting her deceit blacker. Far from rising, she made no movement at all; only looked at her hands and allowed him to go on, conscious of the force of a personality that mastered men and armies now warm and appealing in the full tide of another purpose.

"The victory that I was thinking of last night was not the taking of Bordir. It was finer than any victory in war. It was selfish—not for army and country, but born of a human weakness triumphant; a human weakness of which my career had robbed me," he continued. "It gave me a joy that even the occupation of the Browns' capital could not give. I had come as an invader and I had won your confidence."

"In a cause!" she interrupted hurriedly, wildly, to stop him from going further, only to find that her intention was such that it was drawing him on.

"That fatality seemed to be working itself out to the soldier so much older than yourself in renewed youth, in another form of ambition. I hoped that there was more than the cause that led you to trust me. I hoped—"

"Was he testing her? Was he playing a part of his own to make certain that she was not playing one? She looked up swiftly for answer. There was no gainsaying what she saw in his eyes. It was beating into hers with the power of an overwhelming masculine passion and a maturity of intellect as his egotism admitted a comrade to its throne. Such is ever the way of a man in the forties when the clock strikes for him. But who could know better the craft of courtship than one of Westerling's experience? He was fighting for victory; to gratify a desire."

"I did not expect this—I—" the words escaped tumultuously and cheekily.

He was bending so close to her that she felt his breath on her cheek burning hot, and she was sickeningly conscious that he was looking her over in that point-by-point manner which she had felt across the tea-table at the hotel. This horrible thing in his glance she had sometimes seen in strangers on her travels, and it had made her think that she was wise to carry a little revolver. She wanted to strike him.

"Confess! Confess!" called all her own self-respect. "Make an end to your abasement!"

"Confession, after the Browns have given up Bordir! Confession that makes Lanny, not Westerling, your dupe!" came the reply, which might have been telegraphed into her mind from the high, white forehead of Partow bending over his maps. "Confession, betraying the cause of the right against the wrong; the three to the conquering five! No! You are in the thing. You may not retreat now."

For a few seconds only the duel of argument thundered in her temples—seconds in which her lips were parted and quivering and her eyes dilated; with an agitation which the man at her side could interpret as he pleased. A prompting devil—a devil roused by that thing in his eyes—urging a finesse, in double-dealing which only devils understand, made her lips hypnotically turn in a smile, her eyes soften, and sent her hand out to Westerling in a transitive gesture. For an instant it rested on his arm with telling pressure, though she felt it burn with shame at the point of contact.

"We must not think of that now," she said. "We must think of nothing personal; of nothing but your work until your work is done!"

The prompting devil had not permitted a false note in her voice. Her very pallor, in flattery of idea, served her purpose. Westerling drew a deep breath that seemed to expand his whole being with greater appreciation of her. Yet that hurried hunger, the hunger of a beast, was still in his glance.

"This is like you—like what I want you to be!" he said. "You are right." He caught her hand, inclining it entirely in his grip, and she was sensible, in a kind of dazed horror, of the thrill of his strength. "Nothing can stop us! Numbers will win! Hard fighting in the mercy of a quick end!"

he gathered with his old rigidity or five against three which was welcome to her. "Then," he added—"and then—"

"Then!" she repeated, averting her glance. "Then—" There the devil ended the sentence and she withdrew her hand and felt the relief of one escaping suffocation, to find that he had realized that anything further during that interview would be banality and was rising to go.

"I don't feel decent!" she thought. "Society turned on Minna for a human weakness, but I—I'm not a human being! I am one of the pawns of the machine of war!"

Walking slowly with lowered head as she left the arbor, she almost ran into Bouchard, who apologized with the single word "Pardon!" as he lifted his cap on overdone courtesy, which his stolid brevity made the more conspicuous.

"I'm Not a Human Being."

"Miss Galland, you seem lost in abstraction," he said in sudden loquacity. "I am almost on the point of accusing you of being a poet."

"Accusing!" she replied. "Then you must think that I would write bad poetry."

"On the contrary, I should say excellent—using the sonnet form," he returned.

"I might make a counter accusation, only that yours would be the epic form," answered Marta. "For you, too, seem fond of rambling."

There was a veiled challenge in the hawk eyes, which she met with commonplace politeness in hers, before he again lifted his cap and proceeded on his way.

For the next two weeks Marta's role resolved itself into a kind of routine. Their cramped quarters became a refuge to Marta in the trial of her secret work under the very nose of the staff. With little Clarissa Eileen, they formed the only feminine society in the neighborhood. On sunny days Mrs. Galland was usually to be found in her favorite chair outside the tower door; and here Minna set the urn on a table at four-thirty as in the old days.

No member of the staff was more frequently present at Marta's teas than Bouchard, who was developing his social instinct late in life by sitting in the background and allowing others to do the talking while he watched and listened. In his hearing, Marta's attitude toward the progress of the war was sympathetic but never interrogatory, while she shared attention with Clarissa Eileen, who was in danger of becoming spoiled by officers who had children of their own at home. After the reports of killed and wounded, which came with such appalling regularity, it was a relief to hear of the day's casualties among Clarissa's dolls.

The chief of transportation and supply rode her on his shoulder; the chief of tactics played hide-and-seek with her; the chief engineer built her a doll house of stones with his own hands; and the chief medical officer was as concerned when she caught cold as if the health of the army were at stake.

"We mustn't get too set up over all this attention, Clarissa Eileen, my rival," said Marta to the child. "You are the only little girl and I am the only big girl within reach. If there were lots of others it would be different."

mation, he was gaining none. His duty being to keep the Grays' secrets, there was a leak somewhere in his own department. He quizzed subordinates; he made abrupt transfers, to no avail.

Meanwhile, the Grays were taking the approaches to the main line of defense, which had been thought relatively immaterial but had been found shrewdly placed and their vulnerability overestimated. The thunders of batteries hammering them became a routine of existence, like the passing of trains to one living near a railroad. The guns went on while tea was being served; they ushered in dawn and darkness; they were going when sleep came to those whom they later awakened with a start. Fights as desperate as the one around the house became features of this period, which was only a warming-up practice for the war demon before the orgy of impending assault on the main line.

Marta began to realize the immensity of the chessboard and of the forces engaged in more than the bare statement of numbers and distances. If a first attack on a position failed, the wires from the Galland house repeated their orders to concentrate more guns and attack again. In the end the Browns always yielded, but grudgingly, calculatingly, never being taken by surprise. The few of them who fell prisoners said, "God with us! We shall win in the end!" and answered no questions. Gradually the Gray army began to feel that it was battling with a mystery which was fighting under cover, falling back under cover—a tenacious, watchful mystery that sent sprays of death into every finger of flesh that the Grays thrust forward in assault.

"Another position taken. Our advance continues," was the only news that Westerling gave to the army, his people, and the world, which forgot its sports and murders and divorce cases in following the progress of the first great European war for two generations. He made no mention of the costs; his casualty lists were secret. The Gray hosts were sweeping forward as a slow, irresistible tide; this by Partow's own admission. He announced the loss of a position as promptly as the Grays taking. He published a daily list of casualties so meager in contrast to their own that the Grays thought it false; he made known the names of the killed and wounded to their relatives. Yet the seeming candor of his press bureau included no straw of information of military value to the enemy.

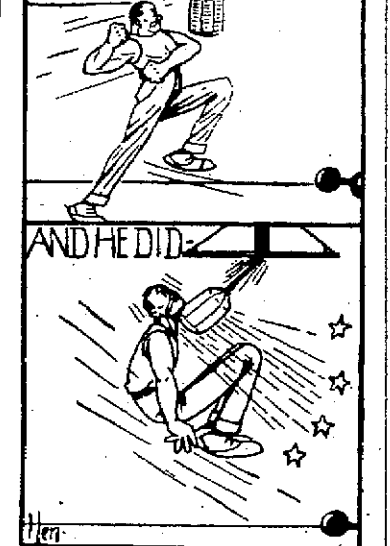

Westerling never went to tea at the Gallands' with the other officers, for it was part of his cultivation of greatness to keep aloof from his subordinates. His meetings with Marta happened casually when he went out into the garden. Only once had he made any reference to the "And then" of their interview in the arbor.

"I am winning battles for you!" he had exclaimed with the thing in his eyes which she loathed.

SULPHUR FOR ECZEMA

APPLIED LIKE COLD CREAM IT STOPS ITCHING AND DRIES SKIN ERUPTIONS RIGHT UP

With the first application of bold-sulphur the angry itching attending any eczema eruption ceases and its remarkable healing powers begin. Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur, made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur and apply it to the irritated, inflamed skin, the same as you would any cold cream. For many years this soothing, healing sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous affections by reason of its parasitic-destroying property. It is not only parasitocidal, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure, it never fails to instantly subdue the irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.—This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Writer Frankly Interprets Germany's Military Spirit.

(Editor's note: Dr. Beaton in his address before the Twilight club on Tuesday evening mentioned Von Bernhardi's book, "Germany and the Next War," a review of which is given herewith, as being one of the best writings of the time, indicating the mental and moral attitude of Germany in the present European conflict. From the excerpts given below it will be seen how thoroughly the German nation is imbued with the idea of military struggle for power.)

Since the outbreak of the European war the one book that has been discussed above all others has been General Frederick von Bernhardi's "Germany and the Next War." In this book, within two years ago, General von Bernhardi, who is one of Germany's most brilliant and distinguished military men, interprets with great frankness the German military spirit.

With startling accuracy he prophesied the present struggle between Germany and Austria on the one hand and England, France and Russia on the other. He foretold the abandonment by Italy of the Triple Alliance, pointed out the necessity for Germany to strike hard and quick so as to crush France, for caution in Germany's naval operations, and the probability that England would blockade the North Sea and the Channel and paralyze German commerce.

More important than the actual military prognosis of the German general was the tone of militarism that runs through the whole book, and the unforgettable and emphatic assertion of the German principle that war is an instrument of policy and a necessary and wholesome factor in the development of culture and the building up of a nation. Below are presented some typical extracts which throw a strong light on the moral philosophy bred by the spirit of militarism.

Peace Breeds Decadence. This aspiration (peace) is directly antagonistic to the universal laws which rule all life. War is a biological necessity of the first importance, a regulative element in the life of mankind which cannot be dispensed with, since without it an unhealthy development will follow, which excludes every advancement of the race, and therefore all real civilization. War is the father of all things. The sages of antiquity long before Darwin recognized this. Without war, inferior or decaying races would easily choke the growth of healthy budding elements and a universal decadence would follow.

The Right of Conquest. Strong, healthy and flourishing nations

IN FIVE MINUTES NO SICK STOMACH, INDIGESTION, GAS

"PAPE'S DIAPHRAGM" IS THE QUICKEST AND SUREST STOMACH RELIEF.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can surely get relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diaphragm, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go and why it relieves, sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diaphragm" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the toilet with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diaphragm" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be sympathetic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever suffer from indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach misery and indigestion in five minutes.

tions increase in number. From a given moment they require a continuous expansion of their frontiers, they require new territory for accommodation of their surplus population. Since almost every part of the globe is inhabited, new territory must, as a rule, be obtained at the cost of its possession by the other party.

Might Makes Right. It may be that a growing people cannot win colonies from civilized races, and yet the state wishes to retain the surplus population, which the mother country can no longer feed. Then the only course left is to acquire the territory by force of arms, which thus becomes a law of necessity.

It may be that a growing people cannot win colonies from civilized races, and yet the state wishes to retain the surplus population, which the mother country can no longer feed. Then the only course left is to acquire the territory by force of arms, which thus becomes a law of necessity.

Uplifting by War. War, in addition to peace, does more to arouse national life and to expand national power than any other means known to history.

America's Peace Policy. An intellectual and vigorous nation can experience no worse destiny than to be lulled into a Phaeacian existence by the undisputed enjoyment of peace. The States, which from various considerations are always active in this direction, are sapping the roots of their own strength. The United States of America, in June, 1911, championed the idea of universal peace in order to be able to devote their undisturbed attention to money-making and the enjoyment of wealth, and to save the $300,000,000 which they spend on their army and navy.

If this road they will pay dearly for such a policy.

War the Law of God. Christ himself said: "I am not come to send peace on earth, but a sword." His teaching can never be adduced as an argument against the universal law of struggle.

Peace Only a Dream. Every means must therefore be employed to oppose those visionary schemes (universal peace). They must be publicly denounced as what they really are—as an unhealthy and feeble Utopia, or a cloak for political machinations. Our people must learn to see that the maintenance of peace can only be the goal of the policy. The inevitableness, the idealism, and the blessing of war, as an indispensable and stimulating law of development must be repeatedly emphasized.

When to Declare War. Expediency in the higher sense must be conclusive in deciding whether to undertake a war in itself. It is morally justifiable. Such decision is rendered more easy by the consideration that the prospects of success are always greatest when the moment for declaring war can be settled to suit the political and military situation.

The Duty to Make War. No one will dispute the assumption that, under certain circumstances, it is the moral and political duty of the state to employ war as a political means. So long as all human progress and all natural development are based on the law of conflict, it is necessary to engage in such combat under the most favorable conditions possible. When a state is confronted by the material impossibility of supporting any longer the warlike preparations which the power of its enemies has forced upon it, when it is clear that the state must gradually acquire from natural reasons a lead that cannot be won back when there are indications of an offensive alliance of stronger enemies who only await the favorable moment to strike—the moral duty of the state toward its citizens is to begin the struggle while the prospects of success and the political circumstances are still tolerably favorable.

The Dangerous Working Classes. Germany has become an industrial and trading nation; almost the whole of the growing increase of the population finds work and employment in this sphere. Agriculture has more and more lost its leading position in the economic life of the people. The artisan class has thus become a power in the state. It is organized in trade unions, and has politically fallen under the influence of the international social democracy. It is hostile to the national class distinctions, and strains every nerve to undermine the existing power of the state. It is evident that the state cannot tolerate quietly this dangerous agitation, and that it must hinder by every means the efforts of the anti-constitutional party to effect their purpose.

Teaching Labor of Fight. We must not spare any efforts to find other means than those already adopted to inspire the working class with healthy and patriotic ambitions. It is to be hoped, in any case, that if ever a great and common duty, requiring the concentration of the whole national strength, is imposed upon us, that the labor classes will not withhold their co-operation and that, in face of a common danger, our nation will recover that unity which is lamentably deficient today.

The Role of German-Americans. The isolated groups of Germans abroad greatly benefit our trade, since by preference they obtain their goods from Germany, but their main value is useful to us politically, as we discover in America. The American Germans have formed a political alliance with the Irish, and thus united constitute a power in the state, with which the government must reckon.

To Seize What Others Built. All which other nations obtained in centuries of natural development—political, moral, and economic—have always been concluded with a tacit reservation. Every treaty of alliance presupposes the rebus sic stantibus; for since it must satisfy the interests of each contracting party it clearly cannot be so long as those interests are really benefited. This is a political principle that cannot be disputed. Nothing can compel a state to act contrary to its own interests, on which those of its allies must be based. Considerations may arise which are more powerful than the most honorable intentions.

France Must Be Crushed. In the first place, our position would be considerably consolidated if we could finally get rid of the standing danger that France will attack us on a favorable occasion, so soon as we ourselves are involved in complications elsewhere. In one way or another we must spare our account with France if we wish for a free hand in our international policy. This is the first and foremost condition of a sound German policy, and since the hostility of France once for all cannot be removed by peaceful overtures, the matter must be settled by force of arms. France must be so completely crushed that she can never again come across our path.

SIMPLY BREATHE IT

That's the Way You Use Hyomei, the Safe Catarrh Remedy.

The most pleasant, easiest, harmless, and the really sensible method for the cure of catarrh is Hyomei, which can be had from any drug store. Just put twenty drops of the liquid in the small inhaler that comes with every complete outfit—then breathe it. A few minutes' use almost instantly clears the head and stops that annoying sniffing.

When using Hyomei every particle of air that enters the breathing organs is charged with an antiseptic, healing, balsam that destroys the catarrh germs stops the unclean discharges from the nose, relieves the irritation and quickly heals the sore and inflamed tissues. The first day's use of Hyomei will show a decided improvement no matter how distressing the trouble.

Catarrh, which usually begins with a neglected cold, often becomes a very serious ailment, so don't wait but start using Hyomei today—it is inexpensive and Smith Drug Co. always sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan.
